

RHODE ISLAND'S Supplemental
and Emergency
Food Delivery Providers

About this Guide

This resource guide has been created to help those who provide services to food insecure citizens get nutritious food delivered to them. This guide can also serve as a resource for policy makers, agency leaders and other stakeholders to help identify where there are gaps in meeting community-level needs that require investments in infrastructure or other medium to longer term solutions.

To use this guide, please search the map and click on your area or your town’s name to be directed to food delivery organizations near you. Alternatively, you can quickly find out information about each program by reviewing the index table on page 4. This resource guide is designed to be used as a complement, but not a replacement for statewide food access databases such as those managed by United Way/211, Unite RI, and the RI Community Food Bank. Those databases also include additional types of food access resources such as food pantries and summer meals sites.

In 2021, more than 75 Hunger Elimination Task Force participants discussed the needs and uses for emergency and supplemental food delivery information. This group agreed that the state needed a resource that aggregated up-to-date information on existing emergency and supplemental food delivery services. With 1 in 6 households in Rhode Island continuing to experience food insecurity, strengthening and investing in our food delivery infrastructures is as important as ever. This guide will be updated annually and feedback on any aspect of this resource is welcome. Please email info@rifoodcouncil.org with questions or updates to this information.
